How It Works

Ipsos Vantis Market Simulator™ is based on high precision, high confidence quantitative market research. We interview an appropriate sample (consumers or businesses) from the universe of people who could buy/use your product or service then expose them to your idea in a fashion that replicates the real world buying process. The research is conducted by the method (online, mail, telephone, etc.) most appropriate for your product and category. A simplified example of the research process...

- Each respondent evaluates the new product/service idea
- Ipsos Vantis key forecasting measures collected
- Ipsos Vantis proprietary model applied to stated (or intended) behavior to determine actual behavior
- Answers to other diagnostic questions collected
- Detailed marketing plan and category data are incorporated with the adjusted survey responses to determine the potential demand and usage
- Alternative marketing plans (advertising, promotion, distribution) are simulated to determine bottom-line effect on demand and usage

Other Products & Services

- DemandScan® quantifies and prioritizes new product opportunities early in the development process and provides product success benchmarks.
